Unchanging

- Idealists are disappointed when life fails to develop as they expected. The disappointment comes from expecting a utopia, a condition contrary to human nature. Human nature really changes little through the centuries. It has good spells and bad relapses.

Environments and living conditions change, but man continues to make approximately the same mistakes that history has recorded again and again. He tends to be self-centered, suspicious, and fickle despite intermittent good intentions.

Wise leaders are succeeded by evil or ignorant ones. Formal education is no insurance against mistakes. Even educators may be misled and lack common sense. Real moral reform is slow.
